Commission on the Status of Women as a catalyst for gender mainstreaming: a dialogue with functional commissions

Chair's summary

1. On 19 March 2015, the Commission on the Status of Women convened an interactive panel on the topic "Commission on the Status of Women as a catalyst for gender mainstreaming: a dialogue with functional commissions". The panel was chaired by the Chair of the Commission, Kanda Vajrabhaya, and was moderated by the President of the Economic and Social Council, Martin Sajdik. The panellists were: the Chair of the Commission on Population and Development, Bénédicte Frankinet (Belgium); Chair of the Commission for Social Development, Simona Mirela Miculescu (Romania); the Vice-Chair of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, Bente Angell-Hansen (Norway), who participated via video; the Vice-Chair of the Commission on Science and Technology for Development, Victoria Romero (Mexico); and the Chief of the secretariat of the Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues, Chandra Roy-Henriksen, representing a member of the Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues, Mariam Wallet Mohamed Aboubakrine (Mali).

2. The Beijing Platform for Action called on Governments to "promote an active and visible policy of mainstreaming a gender perspective into all policies and programmes so that, before decisions are taken, an analysis is made of the effects on girls and boys, respectively". In its agreed conclusions 1997/2 on gender mainstreaming, the Economic and Social Council defined gender mainstreaming as a "process of assessing the implications for women and men of any planned action, including legislation, policies or programmes, in all areas and at all levels. It is a strategy for making women's as well as men's concerns and experiences an integral dimension of the design, implementation, monitoring and evaluation of policies and programmes in all political, economic and societal spheres so that women and men benefit equally and inequality is not perpetuated. The ultimate goal is to achieve gender equality". All intergovernmental bodies, including the Economic and Social Council and its functional commissions, are called upon to mainstream gender perspectives into all issues under their consideration and within their mandates. The Commission on the Status of Women functions as a catalyst for gender mainstreaming and works to enhance the attention of other intergovernmental bodies to gender equality issues.

3. The functional commissions have undertaken a range of efforts to mainstream a gender perspective into their work. The Commission on Population and Development, the Commission on Science and Technology for Development and the Commission for Social Development have discussed the gender dimensions of issues such as poverty eradication, social integration, decent work, science and technology, and ageing. The Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice has considered various aspects of criminal justice for women, and of violence against women, including trafficking. The Commission on Science and Technology for Development, in particular, has a dedicated Gender Advisory Board, established in 1995, to review reports and resolutions in regard to the gender dimensions of science and technology policies. The Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues dedicated its third session entirely to women. Functional commissions have held expert thematic discussions that have addressed gender dimensions, including those affecting marginalized groups of women and girls such as indigenous women or women with disabilities. The commissions engage with civil society, including women's organizations that have given further visibility to gender equality issues.

4. Resolutions of functional commissions and the Permanent Forum on Indigenous Issues have increasingly incorporated a gender perspective, highlighting the opportunities and challenges faced by women in the areas of poverty eradication, migration, health, urbanization, ageing and gender gaps in science, technology and innovation. Commissions have also adopted gender-specific resolutions on violence against women, trafficking in human persons or sexual and reproductive health and reproductive rights. Speakers welcomed resolutions of the Commission on the Status of Women that addressed priority issues of other functional commissions. Given the importance of data disaggregated by sex, age and ethnicity to inform policymaking and to close specific gender gaps, speakers called upon the Commission on the Status of Women and the Statistical Commission to continue to give priority to such data and to gender statistics and indicators.

5. Speakers recognized the importance of gender mainstreaming in the future implementation of the post-2015 development agenda and supported in this regard the proposal for a stand-alone goal on achieving gender equality and empowering all women and girls as well as for integrating gender-sensitive targets in other goals.

6. Participants agreed that gender mainstreaming is a strategy that is applicable to all areas and therefore must be an integral part of the entire work of the functional commissions. Speakers supported closer collaboration on a range of matters and through different means, and encouraged further harmonization and coordination among the functional commissions on themes and issues. They recommended closer collaboration on working methods and work programmes to ensure complementarity and sector-specific value added. Enhanced coordination should aim to maximize synergies among the functional commissions. Joint discussions could be held regularly on common thematic areas, taking into account also the annual main theme of the Economic and Social Council. To facilitate stronger coordination, a mapping of topics and processes of the functional commissions could be undertaken. In addition, gender focal points could be appointed in the functional commissions to improve gender mainstreaming in their work. Increased collaboration could also facilitate common messaging on gender equality in regard to the discussions on the post-2015 development agenda and other intergovernmental processes.

7. The important role of the respective secretariats of the functional commissions in facilitating gender mainstreaming in their work was highlighted. Speakers emphasized the need for reports of the Secretary-General to reflect gender issues, and for commission secretariats to work collaboratively and identify common topics for discussions. Secretariats of functional commissions also needed to provide the necessary support to the commissions. It was also suggested that commission secretariats should be represented in the Inter-Agency Network on Women and Gender Equality.

8. Participants welcomed the discussion with the chairs and vice-chairs of the functional commissions during this session of the Commission on the Status of Women and applauded the role of the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of women (UN-Women) in facilitating such a discussion and in providing technical expertise on gender mainstreaming. They encouraged a continuation of such dialogues among the functional commissions and proposed to consider conducting similar dialogues on other cross-cutting themes. Beyond the work of the functional commissions, participants called on Member States to demonstrate political leadership to ensure a holistic approach to gender mainstreaming across sectors, and in all intergovernmental processes and for providing secure space to civil society organizations in all forums.

9. Speakers provided examples of how they were mainstreaming gender equality across sectors at the national level. These included putting in place institutional mechanisms such as women's affairs or gender advisory offices, the appointment of gender focal points across ministries to support the integration of gender mainstreaming in policies, plans and programmes; adopting the methodology of gender-responsive budgeting; putting in place mechanisms for monitoring and accountability including by collecting sex- and age-disaggregated data, and instituting regular reporting on gender mainstreaming efforts and results by each governmental agency.

10. Participants identified concrete actions to ensure successful gender mainstreaming, including skills training and capacity-building on gender analysis, collection and use of sex- and age-disaggregated data, and integrating a gender perspective in monitoring and evaluations. In addition to gender mainstreaming, speakers also called for a human rights-based approach to policy.

Managing the transition from the Millennium Development Goals to sustainable development goals: lessons learned for gender equality from the Millennium Development Goals and galvanizing transformative change

Chair's summary

1. On 19 March 2015, the Commission on the Status of Women convened an interactive panel discussion on the topic "Managing the transition from the Millennium Development Goals to sustainable development goals: lessons learned for gender equality from the Millennium Development Goals and galvanizing transformative change". The discussion was chaired by the Vice-Chair of the Commission (Sudan), Mohamed Elbahi, and was moderated by the Senior Research Fellow at the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development and former Special Rapporteur on extreme poverty and human rights, Magdalena Sepúlveda Carmona. The panellists were the following: former Professor of Public Policy at the Indian Institute of Management Bangalore and Adjunct Professor of Global Health and Population at Harvard University, Gita Sen; representative of Diverse Voices and Action for Equality, Fiji, and associate of Development Alternatives with Women for a New Era, Noelene Nabulivou; the President of the Centre d'études sur la justice et la résolution 1325, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Irène Esambo; and the Senior Coordinator, "United Nations Fit for Purpose" for the Post-2015 Development Agenda, John Hendra. Contributions to the discussion included statements by 17 representatives of Member States, a regional group and two civil society organizations. The Assistant Secretary-General/Deputy Executive Director of the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women, Lakshmi Puri, provided closing remarks.

2. Participants focused on the lessons learned from the implementation of the Millennium Development Goals from a gender perspective and identified priorities for ensuring the effective implementation of the future sustainable development goals for women and girls.

Gender equality as a central priority for the sustainable development goals

3. There was widespread confirmation that gender equality, the empowerment of women and the human rights of women and girls should be a central priority in the future sustainable development goals. Participants agreed that there was a need for a stand-alone goal on gender equality that expanded on the areas covered by the Millennium Development Goals. In that respect, many participants highlighted the importance of completing the unfinished business of the Goals, with reference to areas such as maternal mortality, access to family planning, women's political participation, water and sanitation, poverty eradication, access to decent work and high-quality education for all. Looking ahead, there was support for a more comprehensive approach to gender equality in the sustainable development goals, as reflected in the fifth goal proposed by the Open Working Group on Sustainable Development Goals (achieve gender equality and empower all women and girls).

4. Participants emphasized that, to achieve sustainable development and human rights for all, all three dimensions (economic, social and environmental) of gender inequality must be addressed and that systematic gender mainstreaming through goals, targets and indicators was essential to ensuring the integration of a gender perspective more broadly.

5. Participants agreed that it was important in the future agenda to look beyond national averages to ensure that the goals and targets were implemented and monitored for women and girls who experienced multiple and intersecting forms of discrimination.

6. Several participants highlighted that it was important for all human rights to be central to the implementation of the sustainable development goals. Specifically, the importance of aligning with and building on existing frameworks, such as the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, was emphasized.

Stronger monitoring and accountability mechanisms as a priority

7. Participants emphasized that there was a need for stronger monitoring mechanisms and systems of accountability to ensure that global commitments pertaining to women and girls were realized in the post-2015 context. Particular emphasis was laid on mechanisms to ensure systematic gender mainstreaming throughout all policies and programmes. Examples of effective accountability systems and monitoring mechanisms included parliamentary reviews, peer-review mechanisms, interministerial task forces and robust systems of national reporting. Participants also recommended that human rights treaty bodies and mechanisms such as the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women and the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review should be used more effectively in monitoring efforts.

8. The view was expressed that a significant challenge to effectively monitoring progress towards gender equality, women's empowerment and ensuring the human rights of women and girls was the lack of high-quality, sex-disaggregated data and gender statistics. In that regard, it was suggested that there was a need for investment to increase statistical capacity to measure and understand gender inequality in a comprehensive manner and to monitor progress and evaluate the implementation of all the sustainable development goals for women and girls. Disaggregation by multiple factors to monitor the progress of the most marginalized groups of women and girls was also mentioned.

9. Participants acknowledged the role of the United Nations system in supporting all countries to deliver on the sustainable development goals for women and girls and called upon the system to support national planning and reporting to implement the goals, in addition to the establishment of partnerships.

10. Participants confirmed the vital role of women's civil society organizations in raising gender-specific concerns and monitoring the implementation of policies and programmes. Several participants acknowledged that there was a need to increase the space, resources and support provided to such organizations.

Investment needed to match the ambition of the future agenda

11. The lack of resources for the implementation of the Millennium Development Goals for women and girls was highlighted as a major obstacle to achieving the targets. Participants gave examples of insufficient resources being allocated to the implementation of gender equality laws, policies and national action plans and to national gender equality mechanisms. They also noted that scant resources had been allocated to sectors such as social protection, health, education and water and sanitation.

12. Increasing investment in gender equality was emphasized as an urgent priority for the effective implementation of the sustainable development goals. Participants agreed that the future agenda required national resource mobilization in order to increase allocations to gender equality throughout all sectors of national budgets, as well as increased official development assistance for gender equality. The importance of South-South cooperation was also highlighted.

13. Participants also raised a need to ensure greater alignment between macroeconomic policies and gender equality and sustainable development outcomes. They called for macroeconomic policies to expand fiscal space to increase investment in gender equality. Gender-responsive budgeting and planning was highlighted as an effective strategy for monitoring investment in gender equality and ensuring transparency.

Need for an enabling environment for gender equality

14. Participants emphasized that creating an enabling environment for gender equality needed to be a crucial priority if the sustainable development goals were to be effectively implemented for women and girls. They drew attention to the negative impacts of the recent financial crisis on the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals for women and girls and stressed that there was a need to build a global economic architecture, including a fair and equitable international trade and financial regime, that would enable all countries to achieve gender equality and sustainable development outcomes. They stressed that gender perspectives should be integrated into future commitments around global partnerships, technology transfer and capacity-building.

15. Participants warned of the current and future challenges posed by climate change, in particular for the most marginalized women and girls. In that respect, several participants emphasized that it was important for the new climate agreement to address gender equality effectively. Ensuring the integration of the three dimensions of sustainable development (economic, social and environmental) in the implementation of the sustainable development goals was also highlighted as a priority.

16. The specific challenges of attaining the Millennium Development Goals for women and girls in countries affected by conflict were raised by participants. In that respect, they proposed that the implementation of the future sustainable development goals should be aligned with key global commitments on women and peace and security, such as Security Council resolution 1325 (2000).
